Summary

Conclude your application letter by thanking the employer for considering you for the position. Include information on how you will follow-up.

Complimentary Close Sincerely, Signature The following application letter template lists the information you need to include in the letter you submit with your resume when applying for a job. Use the application template as a guideline to create customized letters to send to employers with your resume. Then review letter samples to get ideas on writing your own application letters. The first paragraph of your job application letter should include information on why you are writing. Mention the job you are applying for and where you found the position. If you have a contact at the company, include it.

Middle Paragraphs: The next section of your cover letter should describe what you have to offer the company. Make strong connections between your abilities and the requirements listed in the job posting. Mention specifically how your skills and experience match the job. Expand on the information in your resume, don't just repeat it. Try to support each statement you make with a piece of evidence. Use several shorter paragraphs or bullets rather than one large block of text. Conclude your application letter by thanking the employer for considering you for the position. Include information on how you will follow-up. State that you will do so and indicate when (one week's time is typical). You may want to reduce the time between sending out your resume and follow up if you fax or email it. Accomplishments

- Begin your letter greeting with "Dr./Mr./Ms.
- Last Name." If you do not know the employer's last name, simply write "Dear Hiring Manager" or leave the greeting off the letter and start with the first paragraph.
- Body of Letter First Paragraph: Why you are writing - mention the job you are applying for and where you found the listing.
- Middle Paragraph(s): What you have to offer the employer - mention why your skills and experience are a good fit for the job.
- Last Paragraph: Say thank you to the hiring manager for considering you and note how you will follow up.
- Signature End your cover letter with your signature, handwritten, followed by your typed name.
- If this is an email, simply include your typed name, followed by your contact information.
- When you are writing letters, it's important to select a font that is clear and easy to read.
- Here's how to choose a letter font that is professional and readable, as well as how to choose the appropriate font size for your letter.
- It is important to select a font that is large enough so that the reader doesn't have to squint to read your letter, but not so big that your letter doesn't fit well on a page.
- Use a Basic Font Using a simple font will ensure that your letter is easy to read.
- Basic fonts like Arial, Verdana, and Times New Roman work well.
- Depending on how much content you have in your letter select a 10 or 12 point font size.
- It's best if you can format your letter so it fits on one page.
- Regardless of the font size you select, there needs to be space at the top of the letter and between each paragraph and each section of your cover letter.
- Here's how to space your cover letter.
- When you are using Microsoft Word, here is how to select a font for your letter and how to select the font size.
- If you're using a different word processing program, the process is similar.
- Select the content of your cover letter then choose a font and a font size.
- You may need to try a couple of different sizes to make sure that your cover letter fits on a single page.
- How to Select a Cover Letter Font Select a font from the list at the top of your document before you start writing your letter, or: Type your cover letter.
- Highlight the content of your letter.
- Either select the font from the pop-up window or select the font from the list at the top of the document.

- cover letter typically accompanies each resume you send out.
- Your cover letter may make the difference between obtaining a job interview or having your resume ignored, so it makes good sense to devote the necessary time and effort to writing effective cover letters.
- A cover letter should complement, not duplicate, your resume.
- Its purpose is to interpret the data-oriented, factual resume and add a personal touch.
- A cover letter is often your earliest written contact with a potential employer, creating a critical first impression.
- Find out more of the differences between a resume and a cover letter.
- There are three general types of cover letters: The application letter which responds to a known job opening (review samples) The prospecting letter which inquires about possible positions (review samples) The networking letter which requests information and assistance in your job search (review samples) Your cover letter should be designed specifically for each purpose outlined above as well as for each position you seek.
- Do not design a form letter and send it to every potential employer (you know what you do with junk mail!).
- Effective cover letters explain the reasons for your interest in the specific organization and identify your most relevant skills or experiences (remember, relevance is determined by the employer's self-interest).
- The letter should express a high level of interest and knowledge about the position.
- Keep in mind that your cover letter doesn't need to be long - a page is plenty.
- Here's information on how long a cover letter should be.
- Bottom of Form The following application letter format lists the information you need to include in the job application letter you send with your resume.
